Source material for Question 1

Section 9 Theft Act 1968

- (1) A person is guilty of burglary if—
- (a) he enters any building or part of a building as a trespasser and with intent to commit any such offence as is mentioned in subsection (2) below; or
  - (b) having entered any building or part of a building as a trespasser he steals or attempts to steal anything in the building or that part of it or inflicts or attempts to inflict on any person therein any grievous bodily harm.
- (2) The offences referred to in subsection (1)(a) above are offences of stealing anything in the building or part of a building in question, of inflicting on any person therein any grievous bodily harm therein, and of doing unlawful damage to the building or anything therein.
- (3) A person guilty of burglary shall on conviction on indictment be liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding—
- (a) where the offence was committed in respect of a building or part of a building which is a dwelling, 14 years;
  - (b) in any other case, 10 years.
- (4) References in subsections (1) and (2) above to a building, and the reference in subsection (3) above to a building which is a dwelling, shall apply also to an inhabited vehicle or vessel, and shall apply to any such vehicle or vessel at times when the person having a habitation in it is not there as well as at times when he is.

R v Brown (1985)

Brown appealed against his conviction for burglary. He or another with him had smashed the window of a shop. He had leaned in and taken goods. Brown argued that an entry into a building had to be substantial and effective and as his feet were still on the pavement outside the building, there was no substantial entry.

Held: His conviction was upheld. The entry need not be substantial provided it is effective.

Norfolk Constabulary v Seekings and Gould (1986)

Two lorry trailers were being used as storage space in a supermarket during refurbishment. They had been in place for about a year and were still on wheels.

Held: These did not amount to a building.

R v Rodmell (1994)

The defendant was convicted of burglary of a garden shed and the theft of power tools in it. The shed stood in the large grounds of a house and was about 50 metres from the property.

Held: A garden shed is part of a person's home. Burglary of outbuildings is just as much burglary of domestic premises as breaking into the front door, although it can be said to be not quite as serious as breaking into the place where people live.
